WHAT DID PEOPLE OF THE PAST THINK WOULD BE HAPPENING NOW?

Scientists, writers, academics, future visionaries have always predicted what the future would hold for mankind. Here are some of their predictions made throughout the past 100 years:

- Commercial flying will have become entirely commonplace. The passenger steamer will survive on the coasts, but it will have disappeared on the main routes, and will have been replaced by flying convoys, which should cover the distance between London and New York in about 12 hours.
- Wireless telegraphy and wireless telephones will have crushed the cable system long before the century is done.
- Complete meals may be taken in the shape of pills.
- There will probably be a large number of women in Congress, a great many on the judicial bench, many in civil service posts and perhaps some in the president's Cabinet. But it is unlikely that women will have achieved equality with men.
- Domesticate whales and use them for underwater transportation.
- Massive dome roofs will cover entire cities and towns. The roofs will have ventilation systems and lighting.
- Cleaning robots that will be able to sweep, vacuum, and wash the floors.
- Moving sidewalks in busy downtown areas.
- Telephones with screens to see the person you are talking with.
- Computerized health monitors built into watches and clothing which diagnose health conditions.
- Self-driving cars.
- Cars will be able to go months without refueling.
- Flying cars will be the main mode of transportation.
- Humans will set foot on Mars.
- Humans will have antigravity cars and jetpacks capable of operating for 30 minutes.
- Americans will work a 25-30 hour workweek.
- There will be a greater understanding of the nature of human motivations which will make it easier for people to connect across ethnic and national lines.
- The grandchildren of the television era will be squint-eyed, hunchbacked, fond of the dark, and not know how to read.
- Tomatoes will be square, easily packaged by machine and fit better on sandwiches.
- Ability to walk on water using balloons.
- The ability to receive the front page of the newspaper on your television.
- Monorails in large cities.
- Students will learn by knowledge being implanted into their brains through helmets.
